권장 풀이 시간 1분 30초 (설계 기준)

Many cities have invested in public parks on the assumption that green space is simply a pleasant extra. However, researchers who track residents over several years report a more concrete benefit. People who live within a short walk of a park tend to exercise more often, and they also recover from everyday stress more quickly. This does not mean that a park, by itself, cures anything. Rather, it lowers the effort required to build healthy habits, because a place to walk is already available at no cost. Seen this way, public parks are best understood not as luxuries but as _____.

① decorations that make a city more attractive to tourists

② infrastructure that quietly supports public health

③ obstacles to the efficient use of urban land

④ private amenities reserved for wealthy neighborhoods

⑤ temporary solutions to long-term medical problems
